

CFO Pär Christiansen leaves Clas Ohlson

Pär Christiansen, CFO, has today notified his decision to leave Clas Ohlson to enter a new position outside the company. The recruitment process to appoint a new CFO will start immediately.

"Pär has contributed in a great way to the Group Management's work and the overall development of Clas Ohlson during the past four years – a time during which Clas Ohlson has changed in many ways to meet new needs and new customer behaviours. This is a journey that now continues with a solid financial position as a foundation which gives us good opportunities for future growth. I would also like to direct a warm thanks to Pär for good collaboration and all his efforts at Clas Ohlson and wish him the best of luck for the future," says Kristofer Tonström, President and CEO, Clas Ohlson.

Pär Christiansen will continue in his current position until the summer. A recruitment process to find his replacement is now initiated.
